Re: Radio Shack Corporation Emergency Petition for Waiver

Dear Ms. Blum:

This is in response to your Emergency Petition for Waiver dated August 30, 2002, filed on behalf of Radio Shack Corporation ("Radio Shack"), requesting a waiver to extend the marketing deadline from October 27, 2002 to November 30, 2002 for radar detectors that do not comply with the new rules adopted in ET Docket No. 01-278.

You state that a waiver is necessary so Radio Shack will not have to substantially discount its radar detectors to sell them by the October 27, 2002 marketing deadline. You assert that Radio Shack will attempt to sell its existing stock of radar detectors irrespective of the marketing deadline, so that a further extension of the deadline would not result in increased interference to satellite facilities. You further state that the requested waiver will provide additional time for the Commission to review a petition for reconsideration that has yet to be filed concerning the Commission's denial of Radio Shack's previous waiver request.

Radio Shack made effectively the same argument in its earlier waiver request (Radio Shack waiver request dated August 13, 2002 at page 8). This issue was considered by the Commission in denying Radio Shack's earlier waiver request on August 28, 2002. Accordingly, we find that Radio Shack's petition is repetitious, and we are dismissing it pursuant to Sections 0.241(e) and 1.106(b) of the Commission's rules.

Sincerely,
