H. Network Information (July 1, 2006)

Instructions

Column B: Below, identify video programming services (networks) that must be purchased to subscribe to the family tier by entering the number of networks next to the name, under column B, "Limited Basic & Other Networks Required to Receive the Family Tier." These include networks on the "limited" basic tier (Question 5 above) and may include other tiers (Question 11) if required to receive the family tier.

For local broadcast; public, educational, and governmental (PEG) access; and commercial leased access, list the total number of services, but do not individually list those broadcast stations or PEG and leased access services. For example, if you carry 10 local broadcast stations, enter 10 under Column B in the row titled "Local broadcast stations (total number)." If C-Span 2, for example, is carried on the limited basic tier, enter "1" under Column B in the row titled "C-Span 2." Do not count premium and pay-per-view programming services for which the subscriber would pay extra. Do not count music and other audio programming services. If the name of a programming service is not listed below, enter the name and information in a blank row at the end of the list.

Column C: Identify family-tier programming services in column C, "Family Tier," by indicating, for each video programming service in the tier, the number of such services that are in the tier. For most networks carried, the answer in Column C will be "1". However, for example, if you carry Disney Channel East and Disney Channel West, the answer may be "2" in the row titled "Disney Channel." Do not count premium and pay-per-view programming services for which the subscriber would pay extra. Do not count music and other audio programming services. If a programming service is not listed, enter the name and information in a blank row at the end of the list.

Column D: In reference to all networks whether or not part of the family tier, if a network channel is sold individually enter the monthly price in column D, "Monthly Price for Networks Sold Individually." Include premium networks if sold individually.

Column E: In reference to the networks identified in Column D as "Networks Sold Individually," enter the number of system subscribers (from Question 14) that subscribe to each programming service.
