Dear Licensee:

This letter refers to the license renewal applications filed for stations KOB(TV), Albuquerque, New Mexico and satellite television stations KOBF(TV), Farmington, New Mexico and KOB(R(TV), Roswell, New Mexico (collectively the "Stations"),¹ which are all licensed to KOB-TV, LLC (the "Licensee"). We hereby admonish the aforementioned Stations for their failure to comply with the limits on commercial matter in children's programming.

In the Children's Television Act of 1990, Pub. L. No. 101-437, 104 Stat. 996-1000, codified at 47 U.S.C. Sections 303a, 303b and 394, Congress directed the Commission to adopt rules, inter alia, limiting the amount of commercial matter that commercial television stations may air during children's programming, and to consider in its review of television license renewals the extent to which the licensee has complied with such commercial limits. Pursuant to this statutory mandate, the Commission adopted Section 73.670 of the Rules, 47 C.F.R. § 73.670, which limits the amount of commercial matter which may be aired during children's programming to 10.5 minutes per hour on weekends and 12 minutes per hour on weekdays.² These commercial limitations became effective on January 1, 1992.³

³ See Policies and Rules Concerning Children's Television Programming, MM Docket Nos. 90-570 and 83-670, Order, 6 FCC Rcd 5529 (1991).

In furtherance of the CTA's underlying purpose to protect children from excessive and inappropriate commercial messages, the Commission adopted the website address rules.⁴ The website address rules restrict the display of Internet web addresses during children's programming directed at children ages 12 and under.⁵ Specifically, Section 73.670(b) permits the display of Internet website addresses during program material or promotional material not counted as commercial time only if: (1) the website offers a substantial amount of bona fide program-related or other noncommercial content; (2) the website is not primarily intended for commercial purposes, including either e-commerce or advertising; (3) the website's home page and other menu pages are clearly labeled to distinguish the noncommercial from the commercial sections; and (4) the page of the website to which viewers are directed by the website address is not used for e-commerce, advertising, or other commercial purposes (e.g., contains no links labeled "store" and no links to another page with commercial material).⁶

On May 30, 2014, the Licensee filed license renewal applications for the Stations. In response to Section IV, Question 5 of that application, the Licensee attached an exhibit which admitted that on October 12, 2013, the Stations aired the URL address for the website "www.lazytown.com" (last visited Jul. 2, 2014), which appeared during the closing credits of the NBC Network supplied children's program "LazyTown."⁷ The inclusion of the website address is described by the Licensee as being "inadvertently included" and " fleeting."⁸ The Licensee argues that the display of the URL was not a violation of Commission rules because it was only displayed for a short duration (estimated at less than one-half of one second), the display was "tiny" (taking up less than 2 percent of the total picture height), and the display was shown during the closing credits where "little or no attention would have been paid to it by young viewers."⁹

The display of a website address during program material that does not comply with the four-prong test, regardless of the duration or size of the display, is still a violation of Section 73.670(b). No evidence has been provided demonstrating that the website complies with the four-prong test and upon examination of the website we conclude that it does not comply. In particular, the website does not meet the fourth prong of the test because the top of the homepage of the website contains content of a commercial nature in the form of a link labeled "shop." Furthermore, while the Licensee states that the website address was only displayed during the closing credits, the Commission has specifically stated that closing credits are considered to be part of the television programming material and are subject to the website address rule.¹⁰

⁵ See 2004 Report and Order, 19 FCC Rcd at 22961, ¶ 50; 47 C.F.R. § 73.670, note 2.

We note that while the commercial matter may have been inserted into the program by the Stations' television network (NBC Network) or programming source (Sprout), this does not relieve the Stations of responsibility for the violations. In this regard, the Commission has consistently held that reliance on a program's source or producer for compliance with our children's television rules and policies will not excuse or mitigate violations which do occur.¹¹ Furthermore, while corrective actions may have been taken to prevent future violations, this does not relieve the Stations from liability for violations that have already occurred.¹²

Although we consider any violation of our rules limiting the amount of commercial matter in children's programming to be significant, the violation described in the Stations license renewal applications appears to have been an isolated occurrence. While we do not rule out more severe sanctions for similar violations of this nature in the future, we have determined that an admonition is appropriate at this time. Therefore, based upon the facts and circumstances before us, we ADMONISH the Stations for their violation of Section 73.670(b) of the Commission's rules. We remind the Licensee that the Commission expects all commercial television licensees to comply with the limits on commercial matter, including the display of website addresses, during children's programming.

Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED that, a copy of this Letter shall be sent by First Class and Certified Mail, Return Receipt Requested to the licensee at the address listed above.

Sincerely,

Barbara A. Kreisman
