CHAIRMAN WHEELER ANNOUNCES NEW APPOINTMENTS TO THE INTERGOVERNMENTAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE

Chairman Tom Wheeler today announced the appointments of Virginia Governor Terry McAuliffe and North Dakota State Representative Blair Thoreson to fill open seats for a state executive and a state legislator on the Federal Communications Commission's Intergovernmental Advisory Committee (IAC). Karen Jackson, Virginia's Secretary of Technology, will be Governor McAuliffe's designated representative. On December 8, 2014 the Commission issued a Public Notice soliciting applications to fill the two vacancies.<sup>1</sup>

The IAC is comprised of 15 elected and appointed officials from state, local and Tribal governments.<sup>2</sup> Its mission is to provide ongoing advice and recommendations to the Commission on a broad range of communications issues affecting state, local and Tribal governments that are within the jurisdiction of the Commission. The current IAC term commenced with its first meeting on July 14, 2014.
