Dear Mr. Weller:

This responds to the requests (collectively, the Requests) of Real Alloy Specification, Inc., Real Alloy Recycling, Inc. and Real Alloy (collectively, the Real Alloy entities) for waivers of the application fees the Real Alloy entities paid when they filed their Form 603 applications with the Commission.<sup>1</sup> As the reasons stated below, we dismiss and deny the Requests.

In their Requests, the Real Alloy entities ask the Commission to waive the application fees the entities paid when they filed their Form 603 applications, asserting that they are “undergoing a Chapter 11 Reorganization case... and while our business is in the stage of reorganization, but such how is indeed constrained. The Requests do not include any financial documentation or documentation pertaining to the bankruptcy cases to support the parties' assertion of financial hardship.

<sup>1</sup>Letters from Mark D. Weller, Real Alloy, 3700 Park East Drive, Suite 300, Beachwood, Ohio 44122, to Marlene H. Dortch (April 18, 2018, rec'd April 23, 2016) (collectively, Requests). The Requests are identical to one another; we will therefore treat them as one for the purpose of rendering this decision.

First, the Requests fail on procedural grounds, because the Real Alloy entities failed to provide any documentation supporting their assertion of financial hardship. In order to establish financial hardship, a licensee must provide such financial and other documentation as is necessary to demonstrate its financial position and that it lacks sufficient funds to pay the fee and to maintain service to the public.<sup>3</sup> Accordingly, we dismiss the Requests.

As an alternative and independent basis for our decision, we deny the Requests on the merits. The Commission may waive, reduce, or defer payment of an application fee upon a showing of good cause and a finding that the public interest will be served thereby.<sup>4</sup> The Commission has narrowly interpreted its waiver authority to require a showing of extraordinary and compelling circumstances that outweigh the public interest in recouping the Commission's administrative costs.<sup>5</sup> As we have noted, while fee relief may be granted based on financial hardship, mere allegations of financial hardship, without documentation fully supporting the assertion, do not suffice.<sup>6</sup> Only with sufficient supporting documentation will the Commission consider, on a case-by-case basis, whether the regulatee has met its burden of proof and should be granted a waiver.

While we consider a licensee's bankruptcy to be a relevant fact, we do not consider it to be dispositive. Instead, we recognize that "in some circumstances a significant question may exist as to whether a bankruptcy represents extraordinary and compelling circumstances justifying a waiver when balanced against the public interest in reimbursing the Commission for its costs as reflected in the statutory fee provisions."<sup>7</sup> Thus, even when a regulatee is in

Here, the Real Alloy entities failed to provide documentary evidence supporting their claim of financial hardship and thus, failed to demonstrate the existence of extraordinary and compelling circumstances that outweigh the public interest in recouping the Commission's administrative costs.
