ORDER

Adopted: April 30, 2019

Released: April 30, 2019

By the Chief, Consumer and Governmental Affairs Bureau:

I. INTRODUCTION

1. By this Order, the Consumer and Government Affairs Bureau (Bureau) of the Federal Communications Commission (Commission) grants a limited waiver of the expiration date of the at-home call handling pilot program for video relay service (VRS), extending the program through October 31, 2019, or the effective date of a Commission decision regarding at-home call handling, whichever occurs first. The Bureau also grants limited waivers of the at-home call handling rules to permit Sorenson Communications, LLC (Sorenson), ASL Services Holdings, LLC dba GlobalVRS (GlobalVRS), and Convo Communications, LLC (Convo) to participate in the pilot program as extended.

II. BACKGROUND

2. In 2011, the Commission amended its rules to prohibit VRS communications assistants (CAs) from working at home in order to reduce the VRS program’s vulnerability to waste, fraud, and abuse and to ensure adherence to telecommunications relay service (TRS) standards on call confidentiality and service quality.1 Revisiting the at-home prohibition in March 2017, the Commission noted that intervening changes may have reduced both the risk of fraud and the difficulty of supervising teleworking CAs.2 Therefore, the Commission established a one-year pilot program to authorize at-home VRS call handling on a limited basis.3 Under this program, authorized VRS providers may be compensated for calls handled by CA at-home workstations, up to a maximum of 30 percent of a participating provider's monthly minutes,⁴ so long as the provider complies with personnel, technical, and environmental rules and monitoring and oversight obligations and files the required reports.⁵ Two VRS providers, ZVRS and Purple, currently are authorized to participate in the pilot program.⁶

3. In October 2018, the Bureau granted the currently participating providers, ZVRS and Purple, limited waivers of the expiration date of the pilot program, continuing the program for an additional six months, through April 30, 2019.⁷ In granting the waivers, the Bureau found evidence that the pilot program had produced significant benefits, improving the reliability redundancy, effectiveness, and efficiency of the participants' relay services. The reported benefits included (1) improvements in the job performance of CAs working at home (in part because of the CAs' enhanced ability to focus on calls, their increased energy levels, and their reduced stress levels), (2) an increased pool of qualified interpreters (thereby making possible a higher quality of service), (3) improvements in network redundancy (by distributing call handling capabilities outside of traditional call centers), (4) increased ability to deal with unanticipated increases in call volumes by adjusting CA schedules, (5) better preparedness for service during emergencies, and (6) reduced facilities and overhead costs.⁸ The Bureau also found it likely that these benefits would be sacrificed if at-home interpreting was discontinued before the Commission determined whether to implement a permanent program, adding to the providers' burden of ensuring reliable service to consumers.⁹ Finally, the Bureau found that the significant investments made by the participating providers in their at-home call handling capability would be "largely wasted if there is a significant lapse in the program"¹⁰ and that "continuation of the program without interruption for a limited period may facilitate a smooth transition from the pilot program to a permanent program, if authorized."¹¹ As conditions of the waiver, ZVRS and Purple must continue to comply with the pilot program's requirements in section 64.604(b)(8) of the rules, including the submission of reports to the TRS Fund administrator and the Commission.¹²

4. In February 2019, ZVRS and Purple filed a petition requesting a further waiver and extension of the pilot program termination date.¹³ In addition, the other three authorized VRS providers each requested waivers to allow them to offer at-home VRS call handling under the pilot program, pursuant to the same conditions applicable to ZVRS and Purple.¹⁴ On April 17, 2019, the Commission placed on the agenda of its May 2019 Open Meeting a Further Notice of Proposed Rulemaking that would propose to allow at-home call handling on a permanent basis.¹⁵

III. DISCUSSION

5. Waiver Standard. A Commission rule may be waived for good cause shown.¹⁶ In particular, waiver of a rule is appropriate where the particular facts make strict enforcement of a rule inconsistent with the public interest.¹⁷ In addition, we may take into account considerations of hardship, equity, or more effective implementation of overall policy on an individual basis.¹⁸ Waiver of a rule is appropriate if special circumstances warrant a deviation from the general rule and such deviation will serve the public interest and will not undermine the policy underlying the rule.¹⁹ In demonstrating whether a waiver is warranted, the burden of proof rests with the petitioner.²⁰

A. Extension of the Pilot Program

6. We find there are special circumstances establishing good cause for a further six-month waiver, through October 31, 2019, of the expiration date for the at-home VRS call handling pilot program while the Commission considers whether to authorize at-home VRS call handling on a permanent basis.²¹ In the 2018 Pilot Program Extension Order, the Bureau found that the record indicated the pilot program had produced significant benefits and that good cause was demonstrated for a six-month extension of the program expiration date to preserve the status quo while the Commission considers whether to make the program permanent.²²

7. Data reported by ZVRS and Purple support their contentions that the pilot program continues to produce the benefits anticipated by the Commission, and that allowing the pilot program to expire would eliminate these benefits, increase the providers’ costs, and make it more difficult to maintain or increase the quality of service they provide.²³ Specifically, ZVRS and Purple have increased the number of CAs handling VRS calls from at-home workstations.²⁴ They also report that on a daily basis, the average at-home CA continues to [BEGIN CONFIDENTIAL] [END CONFIDENTIAL] CAs at traditional call centers.²⁵ ZVRS and Purple also continue to [BEGIN CONFIDENTIAL] [END CONFIDENTIAL] handled by at-home CAs.²⁶

8. The data submitted by ZVRS and Purple also continues to indicate that the providers are in compliance with the Commission's mandatory minimum standards, as well as the specific personnel, technical, and environmental safeguards adopted in the 2017 VRS Improvements Order.²⁷ For example, ZVRS and Purple report they remain in compliance with rules requiring that at-home CAs possess the requisite number of years handling VRS calls prior to taking on at-home functions.²⁸ ZVRS and Purple also report that they continue to ensure the confidentiality of calls handled in at-home call stations by complying with requirements for at-home workstations to be in a secure, separate, and locked location; installing white noise emitters or soundproofing to prevent eavesdropping; and providing a secure and dedicated Internet connection between at-home stations and the companies' secure network.²⁹ In addition, the reports indicates that ZVRS and Purple continue to successfully ensure supervision and conduct monitoring to fulfill the at-home call handling oversight obligations.³⁰ Similarly, ZVRS and Purple report that they are ensuring the seamless integration of call routing distribution and tracking systems for both their at-home calling stations and traditional call centers.³¹ The reports also indicate that BEGIN CONFIDENTIAL END CONFIDENTIAL,³² suggesting that service quality likely has not been diminished by the use of at-home call handling. In summary, the companies' December 2018 and March 2019 reports support the Bureau's previous findings regarding the costs and benefits of extending the pilot program.

9. Further, extending the pilot program for an additional, limited period, subject to the filing of additional reports, will enable the Commission to continue gathering data to help inform its determination on whether to make the program permanent and on crafting rules to govern any permanently authorized program.³³ Moreover, as discussed below, with three additional providers authorized to participate in the extended pilot program, the Commission has an opportunity to gather even more data to help inform its determination on whether to make the program permanent and on crafting rules to govern any permanently authorized program.³⁴

10. For these reasons, we find good cause to grant the requested waiver and extend the pilot program for six months, through October 31, 2019, or the effective date of a Commission decision regarding at-home call handling, whichever occurs first. Pilot program participants must continue to comply with the pilot program's requirements in section 64.604(b)(8) of the rules and the waiver conditions adopted herein.³⁵

B. Allowing Participation by Additional Providers

1. Requests for Waiver

11. We find there is good cause to grant the three other VRS providers' requests for waiver of the pilot program rules to the extent necessary for them to participate in the program on the same basis as ZVRS and Purple.³⁶ Each of the three providers has submitted a detailed showing of the circumstances supporting grant of a waiver in its case.³⁷ We agree with each of the providers that the same benefits identified in the 2018 Pilot Program Extension Order are likely to accrue for the consumers served by that provider if it is allowed to participate in the pilot program, and will not materialize if the provider is denied the opportunity to participate. For example, as Sorenson explains, "a waiver would permit it to more flexibly add call handling capacity at peak times and in widespread emergencies, and will [reduce] the burden of ensuring reliable service to customers."³⁸ Also, as Convo discusses:

Currently, a constant concern at Convo is the safety of [video interpreters (VIs)] in an occupation that must run twenty-four hours, seven days a week. VIs who travel in inclement weather take risks in doing so; risks that also translate into stress that may impact job performance. In times where VIs opt to stay home during inclement weather, or where Convo has to make the difficult decision to temporarily close a call center, Convo risks increasing the wait time for users who call to use VRS services. Those VIs who do show are potentially overloaded on the queue, having to make up for those VIs who had to stay home. The ability for Convo to have at-home VRS call handling will allow Convo greater flexibility in managing those days and nights where the weather

³⁴ See infra para. 12; see also Administrative Conference of the United States, Administrative Conference Recommendation 2017-6 Learning from Regulatory Experience at 13 (2017), <https://www.acus.gov/recommendation/learning-regulatory-experience> ("Before adopting a rule, agencies can learn from pilot projects, demonstrations, and flexibility among states or regulated entities. After promulgating a rule, agencies may, where legally permissible, use waivers and exemptions to learn.").

³⁵ See infra Part III.C.

³⁶ In addition to a waiver of the expiration date, which all three providers require, Sorenson and Convo require a waiver of the deadline for notifying the Commission of their intent to participate in the program. See 47 CFR § 64.604(b)(8)(i) (requiring a VRS provider seeking to participate in the pilot program to notify the Commission of its intent to participate on or before September 1, 2017). Because GlobalVRS filed its original notice of intent to participate on September 1, 2017, GlobalVRS does not need a waiver of section 64.604(b)(8)(i).

³⁷ See Sorenson Petition at 3-5; GlobalVRS Petition at 3-4; Convo Petition at 3-4. As explained above, these benefits include (1) improved CA job performance, (2) an increased pool of qualified interpreters, (3) enhanced network redundancy, (4) greater flexibility in responding to changes in demand, (5) better emergency preparedness, and (6) reduced facilities and overhead costs. Supra para. 3.

³⁸ Sorenson Petition at 5.

poses a real hazard for commuters, by allowing calls to be handled by at-home VIs.³⁹

12. In short, granting limited waivers to allow participation by these providers will ensure that the pilot program's benefits are available to all users of VRS. We also agree that, absent a waiver, the service quality offered by these VRS providers could suffer due to their inability to recruit (or perhaps, in some instances, to retain) qualified CAs who need or prefer to work at home.⁴⁰ In addition, each of the providers has submitted a plan demonstrating their readiness to comply with each of the at-home call handling safeguards previously adopted by the Commission.⁴¹ Therefore, we conclude that granting the requested waivers will not pose a substantial risk of noncompliance with the Commission's minimum TRS standards of service quality and confidentiality. Finally, allowing more providers to participate in the pilot program will enable the Commission to evaluate additional data that may help inform its determination on whether to make the program permanent and on crafting rules to govern any permanently authorized program, allowing for more effective implementation of the underlying policy.⁴² Equitable administration of our rules is also advanced by allowing all VRS providers to participate in the extended pilot program.⁴³ For all these reasons, we conclude that it serves the public interest to allow additional VRS providers to participate in the pilot program.

2. Authorizations to Participate in the Pilot Program

13. Under the 2017 VRS Improvements Order, each VRS provider interested in participating in the pilot program is required to submit a detailed plan explaining how the provider's management of at-home workstations will satisfy the TRS mandatory minimum standards, guarantee call confidentiality, and protect against waste, fraud, and abuse.⁴⁴ The plans submitted by Sorenson, GlobalVRS, and Convo each contain the nine elements required by section 64.604(b)(8)(i) of the rules.⁴⁵

14. After reviewing these plans, we find that Sorenson, GlobalVRS, and Convo have each sufficiently demonstrated that their use of at-home workstations will comply with the Commission's standards and safeguards.⁴⁶ Therefore, we grant each of these providers authorization to participate in the pilot program.

C. Conditions Applicable to All Waivers

15. As a condition of granting the waivers requested by ZVRS, Purple, Sorenson, GlobalVRS, and Convo, each provider must comply with the pilot program's requirements in section 64.604(b)(8) of the rules, including the submission of monthly reports to the TRS Fund administrator as specified in section 64.604(b)(8)(viii) of the rules, as well as additional reports containing the information specified in section 64.604(b)(8)(ix) of the rules.⁴⁷ Although the reports filed regarding the initial one-year period of the pilot program covered six months each,⁴⁸ the 2018 Pilot Program Extension Order also required a three-month report covering the first half of the six-month extension granted in that order. This was done to ensure that at-home call handling performed during the extension could be evaluated by the Commission prior to the end of the extension.⁴⁹ Similarly, we require the filing of further three-month reports in this order, to ensure that information continues to be made available in a timely fashion to support Commission deliberations on whether to make the pilot program permanent. These additional reports must be filed on or before June 3, 2019 (covering the last three months of the previous six-month extension—to be filed by ZVRS and Purple only), September 3, 2019 (covering the first three months of the additional six-month extension authorized by this Order), and December 2, 2019 (covering the final three months of the extension authorized by this Order).
