ORDER

Adopted: December 30, 2021

Released: December 30, 2021

By the Chief, Consumer and Governmental Affairs Bureau:

1. Due to the ongoing COVID-19 emergency,¹ the Consumer and Governmental Affairs Bureau (Bureau) of the Federal Communications Commission (Commission), on its own motion, extends through March 31, 2022, certain temporary waivers of rules governing telecommunication relay services (TRS).²

2. Background. At the beginning of the COVID-19 outbreak, as states responded with emergency regulations, TRS traffic levels increased sharply and TRS providers' ability to staff call centers was sharply reduced, severely challenging providers' ability to answer and process TRS calls.³ The Commission temporarily waived certain rules governing TRS to ensure the uninterrupted availability of TRS during these extraordinary circumstances.⁴ By granting temporary waivers of certain provisions of the Commission's rules on speed of answer, video relay service (VRS) at-home call handling, VRS call-center status notifications, international VRS calling, VRS subcontracting, emergency call handling, and early termination of calls, the Bureau allowed TRS providers greater flexibility to provide service during this difficult period.⁵ These emergency waivers have been extended on several occasions, and the most recent extensions expire December 31, 2021.⁶ The Commission has directed the Bureau to monitor the situation and consider, if necessary, additional extension of these waivers.⁷

3. Waiver Standard. A Commission rule may be waived for good cause shown.⁸ In particular, waiver of a rule is appropriate where the particular facts make strict enforcement of a rule inconsistent with the public interest.⁹ In addition, we may take into account considerations of hardship, equity, or more effective implementation of overall policy on an individual basis.¹⁰ Waiver of a rule is appropriate if special circumstances warrant a deviation from the general rule and such deviation will serve the public interest and will not undermine the policy underlying the rule.¹¹

4. Although many state-imposed restrictions, including social distancing measures, mask mandates, and mandatory quarantines, have been loosened or lifted,¹² uncertainty continues regarding the current trend of the disease, due to a surge in cases with the Omicron variant¹³ and a lag in vaccination rates.¹⁴ Indeed, the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) has recommended that individuals, including those who are fully vaccinated, wear masks indoors in those areas with substantial or high community transmission.¹⁵ In some jurisdictions, restrictions are continuing to be imposed or are being reinstated.¹⁶ Therefore, many issues remain unsettled regarding the safe operation of schools, businesses, and other facilities, with associated potential to affect both the availability of communications assistants (CAs) and TRS traffic levels.¹⁷ As a consequence, TRS providers report, they continue to face challenges and uncertainties in their ability to staff their operations and meet call demand.¹⁸ In addition, international travel restrictions, of varying durations, continue to be applied by various nations, and their likely future application cannot be confidently predicted.¹⁹

5. Recent assessments by experts and government agencies of the foregoing COVID-related developments indicate that their effects are likely to remain uncertain for some period of time.²⁰ Further, the Bureau is not aware of any significant increase in consumer complaints regarding TRS as a result of the emergency waivers, and the TRS Fund administrator has not reported evidence of an increase in waste, fraud, or abuse due to these waivers.

6. Accordingly, to ensure that robust, reliable TRS remains available to persons who are deaf, hard of hearing, deafblind, or have speech disabilities, we find good cause to extend all previously granted COVID-19 waivers for three months, with one exception, as discussed in the next paragraph. Given the uncertainties described above, a further three-month extension will allow providers a reasonable window of certainty for planning purposes. The Bureau will continue to monitor the situation and, in the event that the circumstances described in this Order appear likely to persist or evolve beyond the extended waiver period, will consider, if necessary, additional extensions.²¹

7. Early Termination of TRS Calls. For Hamilton only, we extend for three months, with modification, a partial waiver of the prohibition on early termination of TRS calls.²² These waivers, originally granted to Hamilton and T-Mobile, allow interruption of a TRS call in “exigent” circumstances, when such interruption is the only feasible means of replacing the CA handling the call.²³ According to the providers’ most recent reports, the technical limitations of their TRS platforms (which necessitated this waiver due to social distancing requirements precluding a substituting CA from using the equipment originally used to process the call) have been almost completely resolved.²⁴ T-Mobile reports that it no longer needs this waiver for any service,²⁵ and Hamilton requests a waiver only for web and wireless forms of Internet Protocol Captioned Telephone Service (IP CTS), to allow additional time to complete a modification of its platforms for those services.²⁶ Therefore, we extend this waiver for three months, through March 31, 2022, for Hamilton’s web and wireless IP CTS only, and allow it to expire December 31, 2021, for all other previously covered services. As a condition of this waiver, we require Hamilton to submit to the Bureau, no later than February 28, 2022, a report detailing its progress in completing the technical improvements needed to fully comply with the prohibition of early termination of calls.
