REMOVAL OF CANADIAN COORDINATION CONDITION FROM REGIONAL NARROWBAND PCS LICENSES

Between January 23, 1995 and May 11, 1995, the Commission granted thirty licenses for regional narrowband Personal Communications Service (PCS) which contained a condition that required the licensee to conduct future frequency coordination of any base station transmitters within 72 kilometers (45 miles) of the United States/Canada border to eliminate any harmful interference to operations in the adjacent foreign territory and to ensure continuance of equal access to the frequencies by both countries.

The use of narrowband PCS frequencies along the US/Canada border is governed by the "Interim Sharing Agreement for the Bands 901-902 MHz, 930-931 MHz, and 940-941 MHz." All narrowband PCS licensees are subject to this Interim Sharing Agreement. Accordingly, the specific frequency coordination condition that was applied to these regional narrowband PCS licensees is not necessary and will be removed from these licenses.

The following chart is a list of the thirty licenses from which the condition is removed:
