SCOTT D. DELACOURT NAMED CHIEF OF STAFF OF THE WIRELESS TELECOMMUNICATIONS BUREAU

Washington, DC – John Muleta, Chief of the FCC’s Wireless Telecommunications Bureau, has named Scott D. Delacourt as his Chief of Staff/Associate Bureau Chief.

In his new position, Delacourt will oversee strategic planning, assist in Bureau management, and advise the Bureau Chief on key policy initiatives.

“Scott brings the type of creative thinking to the Wireless Bureau that our portfolio of challenging spectrum policy issues demands,” said Muleta. “His experience and expertise will be invaluable in advancing the policy and organizational agenda of both the Bureau and the Commission.”

Prior to assuming his new position, Delacourt served as Senior Counsel in the Office of General Counsel. As Senior Counsel, he advised both the General Counsel and the Chairman’s Office on wireless, international, engineering & technology, consumer & governmental affairs, and enforcement issues. His tenure in the General Counsel’s Office followed prior service in the Wireless Bureau, as Legal Advisor to former Bureau Chief Tom Sugrue. As Legal Advisor, he counseled the Bureau Chief on a variety of important wireless issues, including matters before the Bureau’s Auctions and Industry Analysis Division.

Prior to joining the Commission, Delacourt was an attorney with the law firm of Wiley, Rein & Fielding, where he specialized in communications law issues, including wireless, Internet, common carrier, and appellate matters.

Delacourt received his B.A., summa cum laude, from Georgetown University. He received his J.D., cum laude, from the University of Michigan Law School, where he was Articles Editor of the Michigan Telecommunications and Technology Law Review.
