No Better Time Than Now

Posted - August 18, 2009

Today marks a momentous day in the evolution of the FCC's web presence and its relationship with the public. First, we launched the first FCC blog, "Blogband" to chronicle the happenings of the National Broadband Plan over the next six months. Accessible from the Broadband.gov page, Blogband will keep the public up to date on any news, workshops, significant milestones, and the narrative of the Initiative. When Blogband went live this morning it featured two posts. The first one, from Chairman Genachowski asks, "What better time to start blogging than now?" The second one, from Broadband Plan Director Blair Levin, relates the story of a recent team dinner over Chinese food where messages in the fortune cookies stole the show.
