Chairman Julius Genachowski
Federal Communications Commission
445 12th Street SW
Washington, DC 20554

Dear Chairman Genachowski:

Thank you for your leadership as your agency deals with the myriad of telecommunications issues facing our nation today. We are writing with regard to the matter of access stimulation.

We have heard that the Commission may be considering steps to eliminate the incentives that foster access stimulation. As the Commission weighs this matter, we urge you to consider any potential impacts made on free conference calling services. Millions of consumers, small business, educational institutions, and other non-profit organizations rely on free conferencing on a daily basis. We are confident there are solutions that would provide a level playing field for all telecommunications service providers, while eliminating the incentives for abuse.

Again, thank you for your work on this important issue and we look forward to working with you to resolve this issue in a way that protects all American consumers and businesses.

Sincerely,

Donald M. Payne
