Notes

1. A sample of 500 urban Census tracts was selected from the 2000 urban census tracts encompassing the 50 states and the District of Columbia. A service provider was given the right to provide service to the Census tract. Otherwise, the provider was given the right to provide service to the Census tract. For each census tract, the number of subscribers in the Census tract. For each census tract, the "Choice" function in Mathematica with the selection of the provider.
2. In the data file, each row represents the broadband service for a specific service is defined by its download/upload speed.
3. When providers reported multiple rates for different technologies in the same Census tract, the rates were averaged.

Description

Name of the residential broadband provider reporting the rate.

State in which the Census tract is located.

The product of 1) the sum of weights for broadband providers offering service in the Census tract and 2) the frequency of the Census tract's selection in the survey sample.

Technology used to provide the residential service.

The advertised download bandwidth for the reported service in Mbps

The advertised upload bandwidth for the reported service in Mbps

The monthly usage allowance (if any) for the reported service. If the plan has no maximum usage allowance, the field reports "Unlimited"

The monthly charge for the service, $

Monthly mandatory charges not included elsewhere, $

Monthly surcharges not included elsewhere, $

The total monthly end-user charge which is the sum of monthly charge, other mandatory charge, and surcharge, $

"Yes" indicates that the observation was excluded from analyses because the Total Charge was excessively higher than other rates with comparable levels of service. "No" indicates that the observation was included in analyses.

randomly selected using the "Random Choice" function in Mathematica from a list of 58,331 states and Puerto Rico; the selection was weighted proportionately by the number of households in each state. The selection weight = 1 if the provider had more than 7% of the total residential subscribers in the Census tract; otherwise, the weight = $1/(N+1)$ where N is the number of providers with 7% or less of the total residential subscribers in the Census tract. In the sample, one carrier was randomly selected using the "Random Choice" function proportional to this weight.

The broadband provider's reported rates in a specific Census tract within the state for a specific service. The reported rates include download bandwidth and usage allowance.

The reported rates are for a level of service within a Census tract or a level of service provided through multiple providers. The reported rates were averaged to generate a single rate for the level of service in that tract.
